

COMMISSION OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES

COM (82) 157 final

Brussels, 14 April 1982

REPORT FROM THE COMMISSION TO THE COUNCIL on cooperation with European non-governmental organizations (NGOs) active on development matters with special reference to the cofinancing of projects (1981 Budget)

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

1. At its meeting on 28 November 1977 the Council of Ministers (Development) approved the procedure to be followed for the use of the appropriations for the cofinancing of projects with non-governmental organisations (NGOs).*

That procedure includes a stipulation that the Commission will present an annual report to the Council on the use of the credits allocated during the preceding year.

In accordance with that procedure the Commission presents this Report, which deals with the use made of the Budget of 14 MEUA entered under Article 945 of the 1981 Community Budget.

2. Although relations with the NGOs are mainly in the field of project cofinancing in developing countries, other important areas for co-operation with the NGOs are also covered, such as Food and Emergency Aid, Public Education for World Development in Europe, and inter-NGO coordination.

INTRODUCTION

The support and recognition given to non-governmental organizations (NGOs) by the European Communities is a confirmation of the premise that development is about people and that the work of NGOs both in the developing countries and here in Europe is a real expression of human solidarity in situations of desperate need.

The enlargement of the European Communities in 1973 led to a considerable expansion in its development policy in favour of the Third World. This found its most practical form in the signing of the first Lomé-Convention in 1975 and the increase in budgets to include non-associated developing countries.

At the same time and in order to complete the spectrum of development activities, exploratory talks began with representatives of leading European non-governmental organizations as to how the Community could best assist their work at grass-root level with the most deprived populations in the developing world. This led to a first budget of 2.5 million ECU being allocated in 1976 for the cofinancing of NGO micro-projects in the Third World. Over the following years, and to cater to increased demand from the NGOs, the annual budget allocation has been gradually increased so that in 1981 it stood at 14 million ECU. These increases were a measure both of Community satisfaction and recognition that here was an excellent way of ensuring that aid reached those in real need. The NGO reaction to the scheme has been overwhelming; valid applications for assistance have always been far greater than annual budget allocations. The Community appreciates the trust and confidence the NGOs have thus shown in its programme.

By the end of 1981 a total of 856 projects had been cofinanced with the 56.6 million ECU allocated by the Communities in 99 developing countries with 151 NGOs, representing a total joint investment of 163 million ECU.

Cofinancing micro-projects however, is just one facet of Community cooperation with NGOs. Of equal importance are its support for their work in Europe on public education for world development, the provision of emergency aid in disaster situations and the distribution of food aid through NGO channels.

The plurality of the NGO world however, further dictated the need to assist inter NGO coordination at a European level. This aspect of Community cooperation with the NGOs is of great importance and has been therefore chosen as the main theme for the first part of this report. Factual information on the allocation of Community funds to NGO activities is given in the second part and in the tables annexed. The third part deals with Community institutional contact while the fourth part attempts to plot the course for future years.

PART I

INTER NGO COORDINATION AT A EUROPEAN LEVEL

The specificity of Community assistance to European NGOs is that, although its financial aid is destined primarily for national NGOs, it also provides an impartial international forum for inter-NGO contact and action. While a one-to-one relationship is evidently maintained with individual NGOs on all matters to do with their particular projects, the Commission has also striven to enter into a dialogue with the NGOs as a whole. This important cornerstone of policy is based on mutual trust and respect.

The European Assembly and the Liaison Committee

From the beginning NGO representatives were invited to meet with the Commission as an assembly and were encouraged to elect a liaison committee as a permanent contact point with Commission services. These European assemblies have become an annual event since 1975 and are the occasion for a frank and open exchange of views on matters of current and future interest. Invitation was at first based on contact and expressed interest with an effort being made to achieve a balance between NGOs from the various Member States as well as from the various NGO fields of action. By 1979 a sufficient consensus had been generated among the NGOs to permit the setting up by their Liaison Committee of an electoral procedure. This led to national assemblies being held in each Member State at which delegations were elected to represent country interests at the main European Assembly (normally held in March/April of each year). Thus the 1980 Assembly became the first democratically elected body of development NGOs meeting at a European level (coincidentally just after direct elections to the European Parliament).

The Liaison Committee, which can be seen as the "executive committee" of the Assemblies, achieved democratic status in a similar manner. National assemblies preparing the European Assemblies now also elect the national delegates to the Liaison Committee. All these elections are then duly ratified by the European Assembly which can elect additional members to represent, for example, the specific fields of public education on world development, volunteers, and food and emergency Aid. The Liaison Committee has 13 members for the moment. Notwithstanding an information campaign Greek NGOs have not yet participated in the programme.

The powers of the Assembly and Liaison Committee are consultative as they have no role in the appraisal of individual projects for cofinancing. But representing, as they do, nearly 400 European NGOs who have expressed interest in cooperating with the Communities, they are involved closely in overall policy decisions and indeed the Commission tries to maintain complete transparency of policy in their regard.

A positive example of the involvement of the Assembly and of the Liaison Committee in policy discussion can be seen in the recent revision of the General Conditions for cofinancing NGO projects in developing countries. The Commission prepared a first draft from its own experience and drawing upon the results of the CEC/NGO joint evaluation of NGO and EDF micro-project schemes. This was then discussed with the Liaison Committee and the 1981 Assembly. As a further step, copies were sent direct to all NGOs who had introduced projects to the Commission since the cofinancing scheme began. The replies and comments from this consultation were incorporated in as much as was possible in the final text of the revised general conditions, which thus came into force on 1 January 1982.

A similar exercise is planned for the general conditions governing the allocation of funds for NGO public education for world development.

Access to Food and Emergency Aid

NGO access to food and emergency aid was also arranged through these democratic institutions. To facilitate the task of allocating food aid to the NGOs, Commission services asked the Liaison Committee to nominate one agency as the coordinating body through which NGO applications could be processed. The then Chairman of the Liaison Committee proposed the good offices of his own organization, CEBEMO, in the Netherlands. This work was later undertaken by EURONAIID a special organisation set up by some of the main NGOs active in Food Aid.

A similar situation arose over access to Emergency Aid funds. In September 1981, a meeting of all interested organizations held in Brussels worked out a structure whereby one agency in turn would take the responsibility for coordinating NGO requests for emergency aid to the Commission.

The Commission reaffirms its opinion that such coordinating bodies must be transparent in policy and open to all bona-fide Member State NGOs.

Public Education for World Development

The field of public education on world development lends itself most readily to NGO coordination at a European level. The need for a strong identity of interest exists in all Member States to achieve the right political climate for change. NGOs in the wide understanding of the term to include the special interest groups such as Trade Unions, farming organizations and youth movements are all important opinion formers. The Commission has recognized this in allocating funds to assist their education work, though the small budget available can really only be used to prime certain selected target groups and issues. In so assisting this work, the Commission further believes that it is facilitating the creation of a true Community consciousness. Special interest group awareness of the mutuality of problems and approaches throughout the Member States is intrinsic to establishing the credibility of the Community

Assistance towards coordination infrastructure

These coordination functions asked of the Assembly and the Liaison Committee obviously entail considerable expense and effort on their part. To ease this, the Commission instituted in 1978 an annual subsidy for the secretariat and coordination expenses of the Liaison Committee. This subsidy is now such that the establishment of a permanent secretariat can be envisaged. Thus it can be hoped, that in future years, the work of coordinating NGO action at a European level and representative of all NGO interests will be greatly facilitated.

Conclusion

A substantial effort is therefore being made to encourage and aid inter-NGO contact and cooperation. Some exchanges of experiences and ideas have already led to good joint projects and common policies across national frontiers.

Much more needs obviously to be done in this area. The Commission's role as a catalyst for such coordination is an important one and compatible with its specific situation as an impartial forum.

PART II

ALLOCATION OF COMMUNITY AID IN 1981

1. Cofinancing of NGO projects in developing countries (Budget line 945)

Commitments

Notwithstanding the constant growth in NGO applications for cofinancing assistance with projects, as advised in previous annual reports, the budget allocated in 1981 remained at the same level as 1980 i.e. 14 million ECU. Taking into account just the average level of inflation in the Community, not to mention in the developing countries, this involved a serious reduction in real terms in funds available.

The level of applications registered in 1981 confirmed once again the growth factor of previous years. Nearly 400 projects were submitted representing a total request for 36 million ECU (2.5 times budget available). 164 of these were cofinanced in 1981, representing a total Community contribution of 13.5 million ECU. A further 128 projects for a total of 11 million ECU were carried over to 1982 due to the lack of funds. 70 other projects were not considered for cofinancing or were withdrawn by the NGO.

Table I gives a breakdown of the allocation of Community funds in 1981.

Payments

A total of just over 13 million ECU was paid out during the year. This comprised 5.3 million ECU in respect of commitments made during 1981 and 7.7 million ECU for commitments made during previous years. The remaining balance owing on projects will be paid out in following years.

It should be noted here that the payment credit of 10.75 million ECU allocated for 1981 proved to be totally inadequate to meet obligations arising during the year and the Commission was forced to request a supplementary payment credit of 2 million ECU to ease the backlog. This was granted in late December.

The NGOs

86 NGOs of whom 27 for the first time, received one or more cofinancing grants in 1981. This was 17 up on 1980 thus again proving the openness of the scheme and growing NGO interest in it. The Commission is further pleased to note the increasing interest being shown by the special interest groups such as, Trade Unions, farming organizations, youth and consumer movements etc. in the cofinancing programme.

Type and scale of project

Table II in annex to this report gives a full list of projects cofinanced in 1981.

The content of projects remained very varied as in previous years, thus demonstrating again NGO ability to respond flexibly to the needs of local populations and adapt their systems to suit. This is most obvious in the increasing introduction of appropriate technology and of new and renewable sources of energy. Table III shows that the two main sectors covered were training 33% and agriculture 26%. In terms of the combat against Hunger in the World, NGO emphasis on small scale agricultural projects producing food for local consumption can only be congratulated.

The average Communities contribution was 75.000 ECU per project, leaving aside block grants. Although a community contribution of up to 300.000 ECU can be made, in only 15 cases did they exceed 200.000 ECU, while in 54 cases the average grant was less than 50.000 ECU. 25 Block grants were made in 1981 to a total of 1.1 million ECU (average 46.000 ECU per NGO).

Populations and beneficiary countries

Projects were cofinanced in 75 developing countries, of which 8 for the first time. In general, there was an even balance between ACP states and the non-associated developing countries with the former receiving 6.9 million ECU for 130 projects, and the latter 6.6 million ECU for 119 projects.

The breakdown by geographic sector shows Africa 53%, Asia 16.5%, Latin America 23% and Mediterranean 7.5%.

NGOs again confirmed their interest in working in situations of current political interest. Thus 10 projects were cofinanced in Nicaragua, 4 in Gaza and the West Bank and 7 in Zimbabwe. Refugees too, be they in Africa, Central and Latin America or South East Asia, were also assisted in NGO projects.

The Commission, in its tradition of humanitarian assistance and wishing to avoid adding to the misery of deprived populations through political considerations reaffirms its policy of examining each project submitted in strict conformity with its cofinancing criteria.

In 1981, 18% of the credits available went to countries where the per capita GNP was less than 200 $, while 55% went to countries with a per capita GNP of less than 500 $.

NGO projects were cofinanced in 23 of the countries on the United Nations list of least developed countries absorbing 29% of available credits.

Conformity with recipient country development priorities

To be eligible for consideration for cofinancing, NGO projects must conform to the development priorities of the recipient countries. That this is so, is evident from the great interest developing country governments take in projects and the support they give to NGOs in the field. As in previous year, this report will be sent for information to the missions of those countries where NGO projects were cofinanced.

Multiplier effect of the Community contribution

The total joint investment by the Communities and the NGOs in cofinanced projects in 1981 came to nearly 39 million ECU, a significant multiplier effect of almost 3.

2. Cofinancing of NGO public education actions for world development

1981 witnessed a considerable growth in Community assistance to NGOs in this area. A total of 24 projects was cofinanced with 23 NGOs of whom 15 for the first time. However, the budget committed 595.619 ECU fell far short of the requests made for assistance as 45 projects were submitted to a total of 1.1 million ECU.

Following on the pattern of previous years, projects concentrated on the priority themes of Industrial and Agricultural relations between Europe and the developing world. More formal sector projects were assisted this year, reflecting both the growing awareness of education organizations of the possibility of assistance for classroom work and of the need to integrate fully a Third World dimension into the school curriculum. A full list of projects cofinanced can be found in Table IV.

Obviously the small budget available at a European level for these purposes severely limited the scope of what could be achieved in particular in view of the immensity of the target group. It is therefore the Commission's policy to apply strict limitative criteria to the choice of project for cofinancing. This should in no way reflect upon the value of many worthwhile projects which had to be turned away or carried over for consideration in 1982.

Following on the positive experience of the joint CEC/NGO evaluation of micro-projects in developing countries, a similar experience was put under way in 1981 to make an evaluation/review of some of the education projects cofinanced in previous years. This report should be available during the course of 1982. Stress must be placed, however, on the methodological problems of agreeing criteria and the results therefore can only be considered tentative.

3. Community Food Aid channelled through NGOs

In the context of the Community's Food Aid Programme for 1981, 25.000 tons of skimmed milk powder, 2.000 tons of butteroil and 18.500 tons of cereals were shipped to different developing countries through Europe-based NGOs, mostly affiliated to Christian churches. Furthermore, NGOs were actively involved in the emergency food aid programmes of the Community for example in favour of the refugees in El Salvador. In this regard the following extra quantities were channelled through NGOs: 950 tons of cereals, 200 tons of butteroil and 500 tons of skimmed milk powder (allocated out of the reserves of the 1980 food aid programmes). The value of this food aid in World prices came to 33.4 million ECU. See Table V for further details.

4. Community Emergency Aid channelled through NGOs

26 agreements were made with NGOs in 1981 for a total of 7.5 million ECU. These actions took place as much in ACP states as in other developing countries.

The overall percentage of Communities emergency aid funds channelled through NGOs stands at 17% for 1981 as opposed to 10% in 1980.

Situations where NGOs were assisted vary from natural disasters such as drought, flooding and epidemics to political events. The most important of these situations concerned:

|---------------------------------------|-----------------|
| - Refugees in Somalia from the Ogaden | : 1.950.000 ECU |
| - Afghan refugees in Pakistan | : 1.850.000 ECU |
| - Populations affected by events in | |
| . Kampuchea | : 1.100.000 ECU |
| . El Salvador | : 500.000 ECU |
| . Central African Republic | : 500.000 ECU |
| . Chad | : 400.000 ECU |
| . Vietnam | : 300.000 ECU |
| . Uganda | : 150.000 ECU. |

In general, assistance took the form of the supply of medicines, food, clothes and shelter.

5. Assistance to inter-NGO coordination

Four plenary meetings were held in 1981 between the NGO Liaison Committee and Commission services. A number of other smaller meetings were organized on specific topics such as food and emergency aid and public education.

In general terms, contact was positive and successful and the Commission expresses its satisfaction with results achieved during the year.

A total of 59.615 ECU was allocated to the Liaison Committee in 1981 towards its secretariat and coordination expenses. For future years, however, this amount will have to be substantially increased to permit the Committee to properly execute the responsibilities now delegated to it.

6. Estimation of budget requirements in respect of Budget line 945

The increasing number of requests from NGOs to help them with their work requires the Commission to continue proposing increases in the budget line for these purposes. Attention must also be drawn to the need to achieve a careful balance between commitment and payment credits.

PART III

INSTITUTIONAL CONTACT

The main Community institutions discussed NGO matters on several occasions during the year.

The Development Committee of the European Parliament met both formally with the NGO Liaison Committee as a whole and informally with members of the same Committee.

Main topics for discussion at the full meeting which took place on 9 November were Hunger in the World, the cofinancing programme, public education for world development and the North/South Dialogue.

The Development Group of the Council discussed NGO matters three times in 1981 when,

- it took note of the Commission's report for 1980
- it discussed the report on the joint CEC/NGO evaluation of EDF and NGO micro-project systems and noted with interest the revised General Conditions for cofinancing.

In general terms, the opinion of these Community Institutions was favourable towards cooperation with NGOs and with the workings of the cofinancing scheme.

Other events of note include the opening by the President of the European Parliament, Mrs. Veil, of the European Assembly in 1981.

The German Parliament, the Bundestag, in full plenary session on 26 November 1981 also discussed CEC/NGO cooperation and passed a resolution very favourable towards NGOs.

The United Kingdom House of Lords also discussed development aid through NGOs and expressed its satisfaction.

Finally, it is worth mentioning that the Court of Auditors of the European Communities in its Annual Report for 1980, published in 1981 (Ref. O.J. C 344 of 31 December 1981) made favourable reference to "the beneficial effect, keenly felt by the recipients of projects carried out by non-governmental bodies directly in contact with the local community". (P.149.)

PART IV

FUTURE TRENDS

It can be expected that the growing political awareness of the NGOs will translate into a greater interest in the operation of all Community policies which affect the Third World. This is to be welcomed as is indeed increasing NGO interest in promoting the emergence of a non-governmental sector in the developing World.

It is indeed on this latter subject that much European NGO attention has been focussed in recent years. Evaluations of NGO projects and indeed of all development assistance have pointed out the desperate need to help people to organize themselves at local community level. Furthermore increasing insistence by donors (including the Commission) on the participation by local populations in the conception and management of projects have obliged many NGOs into a rethink of traditional approaches. This has led to increased cooperation with counterparts in the developing countries and the setting up of partnership arrangements based on mutual trust and confidence. A striking example of this can be seen in the recent series of meetings organized by a Dutch NGO with their regional counterparts in Latin America, Africa and Asia.

The Commission would encourage further work in this area both to improve the overall quality of projects but more importantly to ensure the possibility for local populations to take full control of their own situation and call upon the most appropriate assistance and support.

CONCLUSIONS

1981 was a year of positive cooperation between the European Community and non-governmental organizations.

In general terms, the Community can feel satisfied with the progress being made to ensure that NGOs, representing as they do the "unofficial" Europe, are being assisted in their work on behalf of the most deprived populations in the developing world.

However, the budget problems this year, as much with commitment credits (fewer projects could be cofinanced than in 1980) as with payment credits (long delays before payment), led to some frustrating situations.

As the advantage of NGO methods lies in flexibility and speed, the Commission should not be placed in a position where it in effect could delay and complicate their work.
