COMMISSION WORK PROGRAMME FOR 2005

Communication from the President in agreement with Vice-President Wallström

I INTRODUCTION

2005 will be a pivotal year for the European Union. Europe needs to create more growth and jobs by injecting new vigour into the Lisbon strategy; it needs to provide the means to support prosperity, solidarity and security through agreement on the Financial Perspectives; and it needs to enhance citizens' freedom, security and justice on a European scale through the implementation of the Hague programme. Key decisions must be taken which will have a direct impact on the future of the enlarged Union. At the same time, the Constitution serves as a reminder to the Union of why it is here and where it is going. The European Commission has a central role to drive this agenda forward and intends to pursue these goals with energy and determination.

The following features of the 2005 political climate are of particular significance:

- Economic Growth in Europe is stuck at a little over 2%. This is not enough to tackle unemployment and reflects broader weaknesses in Europe's ability to be competitive and to promote the key drivers of growth.
- Ratification of the Constitution will spark intense political debate in Member States across the Union. This debate, like any debate on the future of the Union, will clearly be the source of opposing views; but it will also offer an opportunity to enhance public understanding of the Union.
- The negotiations on the Financial Perspectives give the Union an opportunity to ensure that one of the key tools at its disposal, the EU budget, is directed to maximise the effectiveness of the Union's output in accordance with its objectives;
- 2005 will be a crucial year to ensure proper functioning of the newly enlarged Union.

This legislative and Work Programme (hereafter the Work Programme) concentrates on the contribution of the Commission as the body responsible for articulating the common European interest and giving policy direction to the work of the Union. From the early days of the European project, the Commission's right of initiative has been instrumental in galvanising the Union to act in pursuit of common goals.

The Work Programme accompanies the proposal for the Strategic Objectives for 2005-2009. It is the first opportunity for the new Commission to help set out a direction for Europe for the next five years. It lays out how and where the Commission will act in pursuit of strategic priorities over the coming year, in respect of both new and ongoing actions. Annexed to the text is a list of key new actions.

The Commission takes a new approach to its Work Programme this year:

- The work programme is more politically focused.
- Particular attention is given to implementation. The Commission is fully committed to delivering on the priority proposals listed in Annex I in the course of the year.
- There should be a real emphasis on delivering through the highest standards of delivery and better regulation. Section III of the Work Programme lays out the Commission's intentions in more detail.

The Work Programme also serves the purpose of helping all the EU institutions to plan their work effectively. Since it sets out only the priorities amongst the Commission's new actions, the other institutions will also receive a full list of any other acts aimed at the inter-institutional process over the next year. This reflects a welcome trend towards the coordination of the institutions' work – a point highlighted by the European Parliament in approving the new Commission. The Constitution will offer the logical next step by foreseeing a multi-annual, inter-institutional programme offering the Union a common strategic vision. The Strategic Objectives 2005-2009 proposed in parallel to this Work Programme by the Commission to the European Parliament and the Council as a joint basis for the work of the institutions is inspired by the provisions of the Constitution.

II THE COMMISSION'S PRIORITIES FOR 2005

In February last year, the Annual Policy Strategy for 2005 set out the priorities for action over the next year, and the key initiatives required to make these a reality.

The adoption of the Annual Policy Strategy each year provides an opportunity for an inter-institutional dialogue on the priorities for the year to come. The European Parliament and the Council examine the Commission's proposals in depth, and make suggestions for change. These reactions are pulled together in a stocktaking exercise which allows the priorities and key initiatives to be reworked as required; and fed through into the Work Programme.

Due to the institutional changeover in 2004, a lighter procedure than usual was adopted for the dialogue with the European Parliament. In April, the priorities identified by the Commission received general support, with an additional focus on security in the wake of the terrorist attacks in Madrid. Council conclusions welcomed the priorities and asked that the conclusions of the Spring European Council should be fully factored in.

The views of the institutions have been taken fully into account as the Work Programme has been developed. In particular, the Commission shares the overarching objective of prosperity and sustainable development. It noted:

- a strong emphasis on the real implementation of the Lisbon strategy;
- a particular focus on security, with the need to manage the enlarged EU's external borders, to have a common approach towards migratory flows, and to extend efforts to fight terrorism;
- strong support for an ambitious Neighbourhood Policy and for a vigorous development agenda.

The fruits of this dialogue, and the exchanges with the other institutions since the new Commission came into office, have come together with the development of the Strategic Objectives to highlight the key priorities for 2005:

- The central objective is to enhance prosperity through a new momentum for growth and employment, based on stronger competitiveness.
- The separate objectives of solidarity and security will be pursued as essential complements to prosperity.
- Strengthened by its new continental legitimacy, the Union will project its internal objectives through enhanced external responsibility.

European citizens expect and deserve the European Union to play its part in improving their quality of life.

A key factor to turn this perspective into reality is the overarching objective of sustainable development. The European model is founded on the principle that actions that promote competitiveness, growth and jobs, as well as economic and social cohesion and a healthy environment reinforce each other. Tackling climate change, for example, is a prerequisite for sustainable growth.

For citizens, freedom, security and justice are at the heart of their concerns. The November 2004 European Council adopted the Hague Programme, which opens up a new stage in the development of an area of freedom, security and justice and serves as a detailed programme of action.

Finally, if the European Union is to be closer to its citizens, it also has a responsibility to communicate effectively. This was recognised in the November 2004 European Council which welcomed the Commission's intention to present a comprehensive Communication strategy.

Key on-going cross-cutting actions

- Negotiating the contribution of the next Financial Perspectives and its underlying policies to the objectives of the Union 2007-2013.
- Guaranteeing the smooth functioning of the enlarged Europe and the full application of the policies and rules within all the Member States

The following sections summarise:

- the key goals under each objective;
- a summary of the actions planned for adoption under each priority;
- a summary of other key ongoing Commission activities which will contribute to the priorities in 2005.

II.1 Prosperity

An upturn in economic growth is the central policy objective of the Commission. This means stepping up support for key drivers of growth like research and innovation; and tackling needs sector by sector, with a special focus on services. A new impetus to the European dimension of competitiveness will be given through the mid-term review of the Lisbon strategy. The Spring European Council in March offers an opportunity for the EU and the Member States to make real progress towards improving the competitiveness of the European model as the route to prosperity, employment, cohesion and environmental protection. But without prejudging the results of the review, the work of the Commission to pave the way towards a renewed Lisbon strategy can be made concrete through a series of precise actions seeking to address some of the key determinants of a successful growth policy.

- A sound macroeconomic framework is essential to the health of an economy. Reforming the Stability and Growth Pact will help to ensure that stability is assured through a renewed agreement on the rules governing the Pact.
- The costs of poor infrastructure to the European economy are huge. The Trans-European Network needs to build on the Growth Initiative by ensuring that significant extra resources are matched by new measures to make the networks more operational and more coordinated. More transparency in the energy market would also help to ensure better security of energy supply.
- A new generation of research programmes will propose a step change to narrow the gap between Europe's research effort and its major competitors. The EU budget should make a much greater contribution to the agreed goal of 3% of GNP devoted to research. Research programmes should focus on areas where the EU can offer real added value: promoting excellence and fostering collaboration on a European basis, ensuring the research potential of Europe as a whole is realised, and offering economies of scale, effectiveness and simplification. Creating a knowledge economy in the EU also means achieving the EU's goals for lifelong learning.
- Innovation and entrepreneurship are also critical to growth and job creation. The Union needs to stimulate these goals by pursuing policies to catalyse innovation and entrepreneurship and by complementing Member State action. A climate of innovation needs to be fostered which goes beyond technological innovation to embrace new ways forward in areas like distribution, marketing and design. Europe can build on its leading edge in areas like eco-innovation to offer a real stimulus to growth and competitiveness.
- The European business environment needs to be more encouraging to companies wishing to seek out new opportunities. A properly functioning Internal Market is an essential prerequisite to growth and competitiveness. For the real benefits of the Single Market to be exploited to the full, barriers need to be removed in key sectors like financial services and energy. Efficient markets and incentives to investment and innovation are crucial elements to achieve growth and job creation: effective competition is one of the key stimulants to this end. Environmental technologies can boost the productivity and competitiveness of European business. A wider adoption of Information and Communication Technologies will boost growth by raising productivity, opening new markets and improving public services. A new comprehensive strategy will be proposed for the European Information Society up to 2010. Tax policy needs to make life easier for companies and avoid the risk of double taxation. But such action will only be effective alongside better implementation of internal market legislation and a reduction in the regulatory burden. Proper procedures and remedies are required to ensure that rules on public procurement, copyright and industrial property are applied.

Key ongoing actions

- Turning the Growth Initiative into concrete actions, in particular in infrastructure
- Advancing preparation of the international fusion energy initiative (ITER)
- Final year for the Financial Services Action Plan 2000-05
- Development of a European policy on space
- Further development of policy in key Internal Market areas such as public procurement (defence and public-private partnerships), intellectual property and financial services (clearing and settlement)
- Promoting better economic governance and strengthening the capacity for monitoring the macroeconomic and fiscal situation

II.2 Solidarity

Solidarity is a cornerstone of European citizenship:

- The social dimension of the goal of creating more and better jobs needs to be promoted through a new Social Policy Agenda to cover the next five years. Specific work is also required to combat discrimination and promote gender equality, encourage labour mobility, anticipate the problems associated with restructuring, and to launch a debate on how to tackle the problem of the Union's ageing population.
- The benefits of growth must touch all parts of the Union to be effective. This means refocusing and reworking cohesion policy to ensure that resources are directed not only to regions of greatest need, but also to sectors which can offer the best growth potential to promote competitiveness at regional level. At the same time, policies in areas like information technology can help to address exclusion by increasing access.
- Being a European Citizen implies participating in partnership. Citizenship entails measures to nurture inter-cultural diversity in Europe and beyond, and to stimulate active civic participation within the Union. A particular focus on youth would help to reflect the disparate interests of this group. In addition, regulation of the audio-visual sector needs updating following the recent consultation.

The sustainability of our environment and our natural resources has long been acknowledged as a priority for the EU and is part of the solidarity between generations:

- The environmental challenges facing Europe need a coordinated EU-wide response. Thematic strategies are a new approach to environmental policy to maximise the inter-linkages within and between environment and other sectoral policy areas. They have been designed to ensure that all aspects of policy can be taken into account and a varied menu of responses can be used to deal with resource use, waste, pesticides, air, soil, and the urban and marine environments. The EU must also ensure that the environmental and social costs of different transport choices is made more transparent, and give further encouragement to renewable energy. But it must also look ahead: we should already be considering what strategies will be required to tackle climate change into the next decade. Planning now to adapt to climate change, including new initiatives to enhance energy efficiency, will help businesses and citizens to adapt and to mitigate future hazards.
- Reforms to the Common Agricultural Policy and the Common Fisheries Policy have already paved the way for a more sustainable management of natural resources, increased competitiveness through more market orientation in line with the Lisbon strategy, and enhanced support for vulnerable communities. This work needs to be spread into new areas, such as a new phase in sugar reform and adaptation of the banana legislation. A new strategy will offer an EU-wide coherence to rural development and promote growth and prosperity for rural areas. Simplified and improved governance of fisheries policy should come through consolidating action in a single instrument.

Key ongoing actions

- Launching of the new system for emissions trading and implementation of the Kyoto Agreement
- First year of implementation of Common Agricultural Policy reform with the introduction of the single farm payment
- Paving the way for a Maritime policy for the Union
- Implementation of the EU Biodiversity Plan

II.3 Security for European citizens

Security is one of the primary expectations of European citizens. Action in the area of freedom, security and justice commands a strong consensus. Risks from health or environmental crises increasingly assume a pan-European dimension. Action will be spread between the different elements of policy:

- The free movement of persons within the Union requires a common approach to border control, asylum and immigration. Common rules on legal migration and return procedures would offer a level playing field for potential immigrants; and it is necessary to collect the data required to target policy effectively. But border control is costly, and Member States facing disproportionate obligations should have the load lightened by a system of burden sharing.
- The threat to security in a borderless Europe must be faced by a coordinated response. Operational cooperation against terrorism and organised crime, as well as better use of intelligence, would plug some of the gaps. Communication would also be enhanced by better networking of national authorities, and by common access to criminal records. Cooperation between transport police also flows logically from a unified transport network. The Union also has security responsibilities with effects beyond its borders, such as effective customs and other controls on dual-use goods.

- Access to justice must be reinforced. This can be tackled by cooperation between judicial authorities, and by spreading the area of justice to embrace issues like divorce settlements, maintenance obligations, successions and wills. At the same time, individual rights must be protected and the Union should look ahead to the proposed incorporation of the Charter of Fundamental Rights into the Constitution.
- The EU needs mechanisms in place to respond rapidly to crisis and to improve the safety for its citizens. Maritime and road safety, as well as air transport safety and security require response at EU level. Radioactive waste needs to be well managed. Health is also an area where coordination and exchange of best practice can bring direct benefits to the citizen. Most of the food safety rules have already been put in place, but their application must be enhanced by training and better controls and they need updating in the light of scientific evolution and consumer needs. Consumers need both proper protection in areas like additives, and proper information about welfare standards in food production. Animal health and welfare rules also need updating to reflect new scientific knowledge and enhance welfare and health protection.
- Security of energy supply should be promoted through reducing long-term dependency on oil and gas imports.

Key ongoing actions

- Ensuring food safety and phytosanitary controls as well as harmonised verification of the health of imported animals and the safety of imported food and feed
- Preparing a new initiative on security research
- Preparation of the second phase of the Common Asylum System (including implementation of European Refugee Fund II)
- Strengthening common visa policy and security of travel documents
- Stepping up the fight against terrorism by reinforcing EU networks and capabilities

II.4 EXTERNAL PRIORITIES

The new dimension of the Union after enlargement suggests a pressing need to put in place a stable, comprehensive political framework with the neighbouring countries of the south and the east: implementation of this second sphere of prosperity and stability is the central external priority. This needs full implementation of the Union's new neighbourhood policy. At the same time, the stabilisation and association process should remain the policy cornerstone for the countries of the Western Balkans, and the accession process will continue with the pre-accession strategy and opening of negotiations with Turkey and an active phase of negotiation with Croatia.

The enlarged Union can and must also assume greater global responsibility. The Commission needs to play a greater role in promoting sustainable development worldwide, notably through the Millennium Development Goals, and to take a lead in multilateral governance and UN reform. The Union's integrated commercial policy and its vital role in promoting development will lead it to take on greater responsibility in multilateral institutions like the World Trade Organisation. A coherent set of instruments and their improved coordination will strengthen the ability of the Union to respond effectively to civilian crisis or post-conflict situations. The rapid deployment of humanitarian aid in the wake of the Tsunami disaster illustrated the contribution that the effective and rapid deployment of EU humanitarian aid and other assistance can make to delivering on the EU's global responsibilities. One other way to achieve maximum leverage for the action of the Union worldwide is by making maximum use of the external dimension of its internal policies.

Following the longer-term goals laid out in the strategic objectives, the Commission intends to give special attention in 2005 to action in two spheres: relations with its immediate neighbourhood, and the imperative for development exemplified by Africa.

- The European Neighbourhood Policy will share the benefits of the EU's enlargement with neighbouring countries in strengthening stability, security and prosperity. In 2005, the Commission will extend to new neighbouring countries tailored action plans establishing targets on the full range of political, economic and social issues, acting as a catalyst for economic and political reform. For the Mediterranean, the Barcelona process will be reviewed and reworked to ensure that it remains the most efficient instrument for partnership and dialogue, and offers a regional perspective within the overall neighbourhood approach.
- The process of enlargement will continue with the regular strategy paper on progress in the enlargement process (monitoring reports on Bulgaria and Romania; progress reports with Croatia and Turkey). It will also report on the advancement of the Stabilisation and Association process with the Western Balkans. Finally, it will assess whether to recommend that negotiations for accession be opened with the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.
- The Union will make a new development policy statement to pave the way for enhanced effectiveness in EU development efforts and will prepare for the global review of the Millennium Development Goals by the UN in September 2005 by making its own stocktaking and proposals on how to drive the process forward. This should include a specific focus on sustainable financing for development and effective multilateralism. In addition, the Union should make effective use of its bilateral relationships, such as realising the full potential of the transatlantic relationship.
- The Union will also continue its efforts to secure a successful outcome to the Doha Development Round, in particular through working for significant progress at the Hong Kong Ministerial meeting, and by pursuing policies that promote development objectives..
- The new development policy statement and the broad review of the Union's progress towards the Millennium Development Goals should be complemented by a specific strategy for Africa. The specific problems of Africa, in particular Sub-Saharan Africa, need to be recognised with a specific response. A dedicated strategy will help the EU's efforts to offer a step change in support to Africa in terms of both quantity and quality. It must target the goal of a real partnership based on a mature trading and political relationship.

Key ongoing actions

- Implementing a new EU neighbourhood policy through action plans already adopted
- Stabilisation and association in the Western Balkans
- Preparation for the accession of Romania and Bulgaria
- Implementing the pre-accession strategy and accession negotiations with Turkey and Croatia
- Negotiation on streamlined package of external relations instruments within the Financial Perspectives package
- Collaborating with the US on the Middle East Peace Process
- Pursuit of current regional or bilateral negotiations (Mercosur, GCC) and other initiatives to strengthen trade relations (United States, Canada, ASEAN)
- Implementation of the European Security Strategy and further steps in European Security and Defence Policy
- Helping ACP partners to absorb the consequences of the EU sugar reform.
- Ongoing negotiation of Multilateral Environmental Agreements, including ongoing climate change negotiations

III. DELIVERY AND BETTER REGULATION

High standards for in EU governance and regulation are essential for the EU policy delivery to be both credible and legitimate. In particular, better regulation and improved quality of legislation contributes directly to stimulating growth, competitiveness and employment, whilst ensuring adequate protection for citizens and the environment. In recognition of the importance of better regulation, the Commission will relaunch in the first quarter of 2005 its strategy to simplify and improve the regulatory environment.

- Subsidiarity and proportionality The Commission's work will be tested against the requirements of subsidiarity and proportionality: the EU should only act when necessary and in the lightest form possible. The Commission notes the special role which would be given to national parliaments in the Constitution in respect of subsidiarity.
- Value for money and accountability The EU Budget should only be used when it can offer better value for money than spending at national level. Spending must also be clearly accountable, with effective inter-institutional mechanisms in place to make this work. Adequate audit and control systems must be put in place, with a roadmap aiming at a positive declaration of assurances from the European Court of Auditors. In order to protect the financial interests of the Union, fraud deterrence should be enhanced through more transparency and cooperation.
- Consultation It can be noted that a large number of the proposals to be adopted this year are designed to launch consultations. The Commission is convinced that the full participation of civil society and other interested parties in the preparation of policy has a real impact on the quality and effectiveness of policy. When consulting interested parties the Commission will, as much as possible, apply the minimum standards for consultation¹.

- Impact assessment The Commission considers impact assessment to be a vital tool in helping to ensure that policy is made in full knowledge of the facts and continues to develop its practices to this end.² The impact assessment process guides the policy-making process through an open analysis of the options and provides a discipline to ensure that economic, social and environmental factors are fully taken into account. It then provides a clear and accessible public explanation of why a proposal is being made. Impact assessment has therefore been made a standard feature of all the proposals in the Work Programme. In this context, the Commission will ensure that the impact assessments adequately take into account competitiveness. The only cases where an impact assessment is not necessary is for Green Papers and consultations with the social partners. In these cases, an impact assessment will follow at a later stage if the initiative is to be pursued.
- Transposition and implementation The Commission will safeguard the legislative process in its entirety. It will intensify its efforts implement the new approach to the application of Community law³, in particular through preventative measures and the rigorous treatment of infringement when necessary.
- Simplification In the context of its June 2002 Action Plan “Simplifying and improving the regulatory environment”,⁴ in February 2003, the Commission proposed a framework action for “Updating and simplifying the Community acquis”,⁵ aimed at securing a clear, understandable, up-to-date and user-friendly body of EC secondary law to the benefit of citizens, economic operators and public administrations. In early 2005, the Commission will be reporting comprehensively on the implementation of the 2003 framework for simplification and set out its intentions for the future work to simplify existing legislation, up-dating its rolling programme for simplification. The Council endorsed in November 2004 a list of priorities for simplification based on suggestions from Member States and invited the Commission to take any appropriate action⁶. The Commission is committed to respond to the priorities proposed by the Council by March 2005 but the present work programme for 2005 already contains the Commission’s response on some of Council’s priorities⁷.

The implementation of the Commission’s codification programme was delayed in 2004 due to translation bottlenecks in the New Member States, but it is set to result in a significant increase in new legislative proposals for codification in the course of 2005.

Annex 3 provides an indication of planned proposals with important simplification implications.

² Commission Staff Working Paper, Impact Assessment: Next Steps – In support of competitiveness and sustainable development, SEC(2004) 1377 of 21 October 2004.

⁴ COM(2002) 278 final, 6.6.2002.

⁵ COM(2003) 71 final, 11.2.2003. The framework sets out six lines of action: simplification, consolidation, codification, repeal, declaration of obsolescence and organisation and presentation of the acquis.

⁶ The list of proposals include the following priorities : Plant protection products ; Annual accounts ; Twelfth company law directive ; Waste oils ; Waste directive ; Hazardous waste ; Incineration of waste ; Food labelling ; International vs. EU motor vehicles rules ; Construction products ; Medical devices ; Pressure vessels ; Health and Safety at work ; Structural business statistics.

⁷ It should be noted that the pursuit of Council’s simplification priorities do not always require legislative initiatives from the Commission.

Livre vert sur les demandes de dommages et intérêts pour les violations du droit européen de concurrence (Articles 81 et 82 du Traité).	Private enforcement of the EU competition rules is lagging far behind public enforcement. The lack of a clear set of rules for claims of damages in the EU Member States has as a consequence that there is presently virtually no successful private litigation for damages resulting from infringements of the EU competition rules. Communication on the strengthening of economic governance	This communication will provide elements to strengthen the EU framework in order to 1) better combine discipline with economic growth considerations 2) focus more on the sustainability of the member State's public finances, 3) improve implementation.	Non-legislative action / Commission Communication
Proposition de modification du règlement 1467/97 et/ou 1466/97 sur le Pacte de Stabilité et de Croissance	In its June 2004 Communication and its September 2004 Communication, the Commission considered several elements for strengthening the SGP: (i) placing more focus on debt and sustainability in the surveillance of budgetary positions; (ii) allowing for more country-specific circumstances in defining the medium-term objectives of “close to balance or in surplus”; (iii) considering economic circumstances and developments in the implementation of the Excessive Deficit Procedure; (iv) ensuring earlier actions to correct inadequate budgetary developments. The exercise of revisiting the SGP is meant to adjust the existing framework, strengthening and clarifying it following the adoption of a new Communication on the strengthening of economic governance (2005/ECFIN/21). Communication on i2010 (European Information Society 2010)	The eEurope initiative has made a major contribution to advancing the information society in Europe. This initiative runs to the end of 2005, and there is a need now to plan follow-on activities. The form and content of a future eEurope initiative requires extensive discussion over the coming months in the context of the mid-term review of the Lisbon strategy and on the basis of consultations with a wide range of stakeholders. This Communication will reflect the results of these consultations.	Non-legislative action / Commission Communication
Proposition de Directive sur les Services de Paiement dans le Marché Intérieur	Today the legal framework is fragmented and mostly based on national rules. This Legal Framework for Payments is necessary in order to complement the initiatives launched by industry (e.g. European Payment Council) on the payments infrastructures. It will guarantee an adequate level of customer protection, and ensure legal certainty for all parties. It will provide a passport to payment institutions. It is part of the simplification exercise since it will repeal previous EU texts (Directive 97/5/EC and Recommendation 97/489/EC) and harmonise in a codified way core pieces of legislation on payments in the Internal Market.	Legislative Proposal / Directive

Proposition de directive du Parlement européen et du Conseil modifiant les directives 89/665/CEE et 92/13/CEE portant coordination des dispositions législatives, réglementaires et administratives relatives à l'application des procédures de recours en matière de passation des marchés publics	L'objectif est d'encourager davantage les entreprises communautaires à soumissionner dans n'importe quel Etat membre de l'Union, en leur donnant la certitude qu'elles pourront, si nécessaire, engager des recours efficaces dans le cas où leurs intérêts auraient été lésés lors de procédures de passation de marchés de travaux, de fournitures ou de services.	Legislative Proposal / Directive

Proposition de Décision du Conseil instituant un panel en charge des recours contre de décisions de l'OHMI auprès du Tribunal de Première Instance	According to Article 225A of the Treaty, judicial panels may be created to hear and determine at first instance certain classes of action or proceeding brought in specific areas. The appeals lodged against decisions of the Boards of Appeal of the Office for Harmonization in the Internal Market (Trade Marks and Designs) represent almost 30% of the cases to be dealt with by the Court of First Instance. The consequence of this is the congestion of the Court of First Instance, which entails that proceedings are slowed down.	Legislative Proposal / Decision
Proposition de directive concernant la gestion collective des droits d'auteur et droits voisins dans le marché intérieur	The proposal will focus on the management of collecting societies in order to set up a level playing field which will enhance the trust into collecting societies from rightholders and commercial users. Rightholders should therefore see their rights protected in a better way and commercial users should be granted licenses on a more transparent basis, within the Internal Market. The purpose is not to harmonise all the rules governing collecting societies but to impose obligations necessary to the smooth functioning of the Internal Market without prejudging the legal mechanisms to be used by Member States in order to implement them. A Directive seems the most appropriate way to reach that target.	Legislative Proposal / Directive

Livre Vert sur l'Intégration des Services Financiers: Horizon 2005-2010	Following the finalisation of the Financial Services Action Plan 2000-2005 (FSAP), this Green Paper will open a wide-ranging public consultation on the future strategy and policy direction in the area of financial services in order to continuously ensure the benefits of an integrated capital market in the EU. Communication/Recommandation de la Commission concernant l'application expérimentale de la "taxation au pays de résidence" pour les petites et moyennes entreprises dans l'Union européenne	The concept of "Home State Taxation" provides in simple terms that the profits of a group of companies active in more than one Member State should be computed according to the rules of one company tax system only, the system of the Home State of the parent company of the group. Each participating Member State would continue, however, to tax at its own corporate tax rate its share of the profits of the group's business activities in that State. This approach addresses precisely the tax issues which hamper SMEs most in their cross-border activities: disproportionately high tax compliance costs resulting from the administrative tax formalities, bookkeeping requirements etc.; current difficulties with the cross-border offsetting of losses.	Non-legislative action / Commission Communication

The programme (SESAME – Single European Sky Implementation Programme) to develop the future system will require significant involvement at the European level and is currently estimated in the region of 200M€/year from 2007 to 2017 and subsequent implementation investments could amount to 5bn€. The initiative seeks to make proposals to put in place the necessary governance structures to ensure that the SESAME (Single Sky implementation programme) can be properly funded and managed.	Legislative Proposal / Directive

ANNEX III

SIMPLIFICATION⁸

The following items for adoption in the Work Programme would make a significant contribution to the programme of simplification:

Thematic Strategy on Air Pollution

Thematic Strategy on Prevention and Recycling of Waste

⁸ In February 2003, the Commission presented an ambitious Simplification Programme (COM(2003) 71) designed to simplify and up-date the content of existing EU legislation, and reduce its volume. This initiative resulted in a rolling programme for simplification which has been updated by the Commission on regular basis. Some of the initiatives listed in the present annex implement this simplification programme. It should be recalled also that the Council endorsed in November 2004 a list of priorities for simplification based on suggestions from Member States and invited the Commission to take any appropriate action. The Council list of proposals include the following items: Plant protection products; Annual accounts; Twelfth company law directive; Waste oils; Waste directive; Hazardous waste; Incineration of waste; Food labelling; International vs. EU motor vehicles rules; Construction products; Medical devices; Pressure vessels; Health and safety at work; Structural business statistics. The present work programme for 2005 already contains the Commission's response on some of Council's priorities and it should be noted that the pursuit of Council's simplification priorities do not always require legislative initiatives from the Commission.
