EC COMMISSION COMPETITION FOR LORENZO NATALI PRIZE FOR JOURNALISM

The EC Commission is inviting entries for the second Lorenzo Natali Prize for Journalism competition. The competition was first held in 1992.

Named for Lorenzo Natali, a former EC Commission Vice President for development cooperation who died in August 1989, the competition is open to journalists all over the world who write on development issues.

Only stories published during 1992 in one of the European Community's nine official languages are eligible. The EC's official languages are Danish, Dutch, English, French, German, Greek, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish.

Particular attention will be paid to articles which stand out for their defense of human rights and democracy as vital aspects of economic and social development.

Applicants must submit by October 15, 1993, two original copies of the publication featuring their report. Contestants who are citizens of or resident in the United States can send their applications to the nearest EC delegation or office (see addresses at bottom of page).

The best entry will be selected in Brussels by a jury of Commission officials, chaired by EC Development Commissioner Manuel Marin and involving outside experts.

The prize, which is worth 5000 ECU ($5,600 at today's exchange rates), will be awarded by November 30, 1993.
